Headline:
Feeling autumnal today in showers and brisk winds.

Today:
Scattered showers, mainly focused across western Isles and coasts, while best of the brighter spells appear towards Inverness. However in the fresh to strong west to northwest winds and lower temperatures it will feel autumnal. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Tonight:
Scattered showers during the evening, with best of the limited clear spells in east. Cloud thickening from west overnight, bringing areas of patchy rain to most by dawn Monday. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Monday:
A dull, overcast day with occasional rain, always most persistent and heavier across western and northern areas, with the best of the limited shelter in the Great Glen. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Cloudy with periods of rain, turning heavier at times, particularly in the north and west. Winds occasionally strong from later Wednesday.
